JIM GETS A JOB IN 10 EASY STEPS

The process of landing a job can be more of an adventure than anyone might imagine.

1 Jim finds a job online. He can't quite figure out what the position does - something about accounting. Jim's an accountant. Cool enough.

2 It's a cool company, so Jim's still interested. He takes 45 minutes filling out forms and then clicks apply.

3 He gets an automated email thanking him for applying. "Thank you (Jim) for applying to our (Accounting Specialist) role. We value your interest in working for us."

4 Three months go by. Jim gets a call from the employer about a totally unrelated job - just to "see, if he's interested."

5 Another three months go by before Jim gets an urgent email asking him to interview TOMORROW for an open job. He cancels his dinner date and goes on the interview.

6 Jim meets with the hiring manager. Things go alright and they part on a positive note.

7 Two weeks later, Jim gets a brief email from the hiring manager thanking him for coming in.

8 Two months pass before Jim gets tired of waiting. He calls another manager whose name was mentioned during the interview. They schedule an office interview the next day.

9 Jim and the new manager hit it off. Much to Jim's surprise, he gets offered a job on the spot.

10 A week later, the HR department calls Jim to give him the official offer. The position pays $2,250 less than the hiring manager said, has a different title, and reports to a different manager. But by this time, Jim needs a job. He takes it.

Now Jim has a job - and it only took a good part of the year. Does it get any better than this?
