Charlie Chaplin's Story

AS NARRATED BY MR. CHAPLIN HIMSELF

I am going to reconstruct, as far as possible, Charlie Chaplin's story just as he told it to me, in various little talks and chats between pictures, or baths, or dinner engagements, or whatever seemed to be coming interestingly between us. I found him a quiet, simple, rather lovable little chap, with no especial ambition except to be of entertaining service to the world. He balked at the idea of writing his own autobiography or having it written "to him," said he'd read fifty autobiographies of more or less well known people which were just out of words, which they'd never heard in their lives, so what was the use? But as I said, I will endeavor to tell his story as nearly in his own words as I can!

ACTORS trying to write autobiographies are like girls trying to make fudge. They use up a lot of good material—such as sugar and ink—and don't accomplish much. Like fudge, the story of a fellow's life ought really to be reserved for his immediate relatives.

If I were Lord Kitchener, doing things and saying things that made history, I could understand why the story of my life ought to be written; but I am just a little chap trying to make people laugh. They are all so anxious to be happy that they eagerly help me make the laughs—the audiences, I mean. But they give me all the credit—not taking any themselves for being so willing to laugh. So I feel, in a way, that in telling this story, I am just talking it over with my business partners—the end of the firm that really makes the laughs.

Some day when I have made money enough out of my share, I am going to buy a little farm and a good old horse and buggy—automobile agents can read this part twice—and retire; sometimes I will ride into town and go to a moving picture show and see some other fellow making them laugh.

In the circumstances, I guess you can just put this story down to this: that Charley Chaplin gives an account of himself to the firm.

When I was a little boy, the last thing I dreamed of was being a comedian. My idea was to be a member of Parliament or a great musician. I wasn't quite clear which. The only thing I really dreamed about was being rich. We were so poor that wealth seemed to me the summit of
